Mastery learning (or, as it was initially called, "learning for mastery") is an instructional strategy and educational philosophy, first formally proposed by Benjamin Bloom in 1968. Mastery learning maintains that students must achieve a level of mastery (e.g., 90% on a knowledge test) in prerequisite knowledge before moving forward to learn subsequent information. Placement tests powered by adaptive learning are the fastest way to earn progress and complete a course on Study.com. The meaning of 'theory' As a term of art, 'social theory' is a distinctly recent invention. No such term exists in English or in any other language before the twentieth century and even in the twentieth century it is not common before about the 1940s. Auguste Comte coined the term 'sociology' in France in the 1840s, but 'sociology' too did not gain widespread currency as a term
