Diagnosis and treatment of dermatophytosis in dogs and cats. Clinical Consensus Guidelines of the World Association for Veterinary Dermatology

Windy Problems in Dogs: Dogs may sometimes suffer from flatulence or excess wind. This is a condition which evokes various responses from humour to disgust but it should be taken seriously, as it may be a sign of an underlying gastrointestinal problem. I specialise in the treatment of dog and cat behaviour problems. Every day I help people and their dogs and cats near Edinburgh get back on the right track by providing effective and practical behaviour and training advice (although I recently took a short break to train a dog to fly a plane!). The problems I deal with are hugely varied, and include: aggression towards people; aggression ...
