

Download World War II Survivors Lessons In Resilience

Engaging and inspiring stories hold timeless lessons for people in all walks of life today. Those who were interviewed represent nearly all aspects of WWII: Soldiers, Marines, Sailors, Airmen, Navajo Code Talkers, Tuskegee Airmen, Battle of the Bulge, Iwo Jima, and more. I find the stories and insights of these combat survivors wonderfully inspiring and moving. These aren't psychologists talking, but real-life people who have lived through incredible hardship. Their experiences make me feel that I understand resilience better and know how to become more resilient myself. The lessons are applicable to everyone. WWII Survivors - Lessons in Resilience. Schiraldi's interviewees included people who had been a Navajo Code Talker, a Tuskegee Airman, Marines in the Pacific, GIs in Europe, Sailors, Airmen, prisoners of war, survivors of the Bataan Death March and the Burma-Thailand Death Railway --virtually all aspects of the war. Holocaust survivors and twin brothers Dr. Bernard Schanzer and Mr. Henry Schanzer spoke to a standing room only auditorium about their experience in Nazi-occupied France during World War II, where they survived through their mother's resourcefulness and the help of others who put their own lives at risk.